Samsung SMART TV

APP OF THE MONTH

Your guide to the coolest new apps on Samsung Smart TV

● Watching sport live in person is great, but we reckon watching it at home is better – especially now Auntie has launched its new BBC Sport app. Think of this as the Red Button on steroids – it already offers F1 fans onboard and driver cam footage, multi-feed race coverage and exclusive videos from practice sessions, and Euro 2012 will soon get the same in-depth coverage. The app will be available on Samsung Smart TVs by mid-June, just in time for Wimbledon – itself a mere warm-up for seven weeks of Olympic action. Specifics are still TBC, but expect up to 24 live video streams, plus on-demand options. Best of all, it's free!

● Smart TV is available on more than 25 Samsung flatscreens, from the sleek, range-topping ES8000 to the entry-level ES5400. All let you stream video, use apps and browse the internet. Selected Samsung Blu-ray players and home cinema systems also offer similar features through Smart Hub.

THAT'S SO SMART

Five results we'd like to see in 2012

- 1 | A British Euros winner
- 2 | Andy Murray winning a Wimbledon final
- 3 | Team GB topping the Olympic medal charts
- 4 | A British F1 Champ
- 5 | A British pig, flying

What a turn-on GSM Remote Controlled Power Socket

£150 | energenie4u.co.uk

We know what you're thinking: damn, that's one sleek, sexy product. But don't just go falling in love with the GSM Remote Controlled Power Socket for her looks or her snappy name. The reason you find this baby irresistible is because you can tell her to turn your gadgets on and off at the plug – by text. Go on hols and leave your NAS drive powered down until you need a file, leave your PVR safely off until you want it to record something – all you gotta do is text. Just don't go sending her anything nasty, now.

Rise and shhh Ramos alarm clock

from US$160 | ramosclock.com

Before the invention of the alarm clock, our ancestors had a system for getting up early: they drank a few cups of water at bedtime. Come 6AM, they were faced with two choices: get up, or get used to people calling them That Guy Who Always Smells of Wee. The Ramos also forces you to get up, because you can't turn it off from in bed – you have to punch a code into the panel, which you hang on the wall in your bathroom or kitchen, to wirelessly deactivate it.

Water way to have a good time Yamaha World Grand Prix Waverunner

£13,500 | yamaha-motor.eu

One of the best things about the coming zombie apocalypse is the amount of time it'll give us on the water; when dry land is a place of brain-munching horror, kiteboarding and surfing will become very popular. And this 181-engined Waverunner will be even more popular. It has a NanoXcel hull that's 25% lighter than your standard hull and very tough – handy for warding off pesky zom-sharks. The limited edition 50th anniversary livery will make even the odd blood splash look smart.
